++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Remaining largely cloudy and dry, with some sunny evening spells.

Today:
Largely cloudy, with the best of the sunshine in the west, although some sunny or brighter spells developing later. Patchy light rain over high ground midmorning, clearing by noon. Feeling quite cool under the cloud, but warmer in the sunshine. Maximum temperature 19 deg C (66 deg F).

Tonight:
Variable cloud cover through the evening, allowing for plenty of sunny spells before sunset. Cloud thickens again for many, particularly eastern areas. Under starry skies temperatures drop sharply. Remaining dry. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Wednesday:
Another cloudy and cool day, with some warmer sunny or bright spells, most frequently found in the west or south. Isolated light rain in the morning, and over higher ground. Maximum temperature 19 deg C (66 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Variable cloud throughout, feeling pleasant under the occasional clear skies, mostly in the west. Some light rain or drizzle over high ground, but largely dry. Chilly nights for some.
